1839

The Alsbacher document is an ethical testament written by Lazarus Kohn, a teacher in the small Jewish community of Unsleben in Barvaria, Germany. The group of Jewish immigrants from Unsleben were the company of settlers whose arrival late in the summer of 1839 marks the beginning of the Jewish community of Cleveland.

My dear friends Moses and Jetta Alsbacher:

I give you by way of saying goodbye a list of names of the people of your faith with the dearest wish that you may present these names to your future heirs, yes, even to your great-grandchildren, of which may you have many, under the best family relationship and under pleasant economic circumstances.

I further wish and hope that the Almighty, who reigns over the ocean as well as over dry land, to whom thunder and storms must pay heed, shall give you good angels as travel companions, so that you my dear friends, may arrive undisturbed and healthy in body and soul at the place of your destiny, in the land of freedom.

But I must also, as a friend, ask a favor of you.

Friends! You are traveling to a land of freedom where the opportunity will be presented to live without compulsory religious education.

Resist and withstand this tempting freedom and do not turn away from the religion of our fathers. Do not throw away your holy religion for quickly lost earthly pleasures, because your religion brings you consolation and quiet in this life and it will bring you happiness for certain in the other life.

Don't tear yourself away from the laws in which your fathers and mothers searched for assurance and found it.

The promise to remain good Jews may never and should never be broken during the trip, not in your homelife, nor when you go to sleep, nor when you rise again, nor in the raising of your children.

And now, my dear friends, have a pleasant trip and forgive me for these honest words to which the undersigned will forever remain true.

Your friend, Lazarus Kohn, Teacher

Unsleben near Neustadt on the Saale in Lower Franconia in the Kingdom of Bavaria the 5th of May 1839.

[N.B. Numbers in parentheses are those of pages of the original document. Spellings of names are transliterated from the German, e.g. "Jetta" as in the German rather than "Yetta."]

Rabbi Malcolm H. Stern

New York, New York 10021

Dear Rabbi Stern:

I hope you will forgive this somewhat belated note of appreciation for your talk at the Western Reserve Historical Society on January 14th. Despite the weather, the turnout was an excellent one, which is a credit to both you and the subject. You are the last one who needs to be told about the interest in Jewish roots, and I am sure that the members of the audience whom you introduced were most pleased by their recognition.

I don't think that I shall forget the discussion period when Mr. Goldsmith stood up and said that he was the son of a Civil War veteran. That kind of tie at this point in time is exciting, and I plan to call on Mr. Goldsmith in the very near future for an interview.

I am enclosing a translation of the Alsbacher document, which lists the company of emigrants who left the town of Unsleben in 1839. The most significant pages are pages 45 and 46, listing the 18 adults and children who left during that time period. Our records locally would indicate that the Alsbacher, Hopfermann, the Thorman brothers, and the Rosenbaum families came to Cleveland, as did Regina (or) Reichel Klein. I, at least, have found no trace of numbers 14, 15, 16 and 18, coming to Cleveland. Please forgive the typing, which dates back to an early translation when word of the document first came to hand. You will note from the document that Simson Thorman is noted as already being in America. As you mentioned, he married Regina Klein, and we here assume that the wedding took place in Cleveland some time in the latter part of 1839 when the Unsleben group arrived.

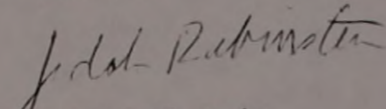

I have talked to Meredith Colket about reimbursing you for your travel expenses, which we will do as soon as he sends us the bill. Thank you
